

CAN'T LIE – I’M FREAKING OUT A LITTLE...

I've been invited to speak at this weekend's Clean & Green Hackathon, which is a platform for urban solutions to our environmental issues. People from all walks of life, will be joining forces to build things that help us conserve and protect our environment, focusing on: air quality, dengue prevention, public cleanliness and recycling. I can't wait to see the ideas that come up – when like-minded people come together, it's always so incredible what can be done!

I'm really excited, but equally nervous... I hope that sharing my green journey, and how beautifully imperfect it's been, will offer a fresh perspective about what really motivates us to take on new healthy habits and inspire change.

If you are in Singapore – come join! Get involved, meet new friends and spend a weekend building solutions that can add value to our lives. Whether you have tech skills, design skills, management skills... everyone can help! Plus, you can lend me support as I face one of my biggest fears – public speaking!!
